

Diffraction Managers Group and Alternative Impact Asset Manager Conservation Resource Partners Announce Deal

Diffraction to take position in sustainable land use investment leader with focus on US farmland and timberland

Partnership diversifies Diffraction's portfolio while building out Conservation's distribution and business-building capabilities

BOSTON and EXETER, NH, January 11, 2023 – Diffraction Managers Group, the multi-affiliate asset manager and centralized distribution platform launched by 1251 Capital Group, today announced it has entered into a partnership with Conservation Resource Partners, LLC ("Conservation Resources"), a leading alternative investment firm focused on impact real asset investing. Conservation Resources' unique strategies combine impact investments in real assets and associated value chain entities to generate alpha while also enhancing the impact outcomes of the land and associated assets it invests.

Since inception, Conservation Resources has invested over $1 billion across over 35 portfolio investments in six funds which have resulted in the permanent protection of 400,000 acres of land and over 1,200 miles of rivers and streams, among a number of other impact outcomes.

The new partnership brings Conservation Resources' regenerative farmland and impact timberland strategies to Diffraction's already unique product set and further bolstering Diffraction's alternative impact offerings alongside Greenbacker Capital Management and Gitterman Wealth Management. Conservation Resources will be well positioned for continued growth by leveraging Diffraction's expertise in multi-channel distribution and product structuring expertise. Under the terms of the agreement, Diffraction will acquire an equity stake in Conservation Resources and have two members join Conservation Resources' Board of Directors.

"We see Conservation Resources as offering a compelling opportunity to partner with a manager of differentiated and impactful investment strategies well positioned for growth in today's environment. We believe Conservation's goals align with Diffraction's, and we see real value and wealth creation opportunities," said John Hailer, Chairman of Diffraction. "With continued generationally-high inflation possible, Conservation Resources also provides an alternative that will be increasingly attractive to investors in the immediate future as a natural hedge against inflation."

Paul Young, Chief Executive Officer and co-founder of Conservation Resources, said, "We are thrilled to have the opportunity to partner with Diffraction, which brings a unique set of complementary skills to help us grow our impact strategy going forward. We see Diffraction as a strategic partner that can help guide us into our next phase of growth, providing competitive returns while enhancing the positive impact our strategies have on the environment."

Under the agreement, the firm will retain independence and full control of the investment process and function, consistent with Diffraction's policy of empowering management teams to build enduring businesses. "In working with the team over the last few months, we have found a common vision for looking towards the future of asset management and developing innovative ideas on how to impact clients' portfolios," said Hailer. "The Conservation Resources team also embodies what we at Diffraction want to do: Hold our values close and do well by doing good."

Diffraction is led by asset management veterans known for their expertise in building multi-boutique platforms including Michael Wilson, co-CEO of 1251 Capital Group and formerly a member of the founding management team of Affiliated Managers Group (NYSE:AMG), and John Hailer, Chairman of Diffraction Managers Group (and formerly President & CEO of Natixis Global Asset Management in the Americas and Asia).

Further terms of the investment partnership were not disclosed.
